

Joe C. Glover

Joe Glover is the president of Nation Drug Search.

Joe was a 35-year veteran in the textile and apparel industry prior to starting National Drug Search, LLC in 2001. His goal was to provide industry with a new affordable and practical tool for improving workplace safety. He has developed a new low cost safety service that helps lower cost by deterring drugs in the workplace using certified detector dogs.

Even with drug testing program sin place, businesses continue to cope with the costly impact of drugs in the workplace. Drug deterrence using detector dogs is an additional new low cost tool to help companies improve insurance experience ratings and lower cost by deterring drugs in the workplace.

Joe has extensive training in working with narcotics detector dogs. He has trained with Military trainers from Sweden and noted industry trainers from Canada and the US. He has trained with U.S. Customs and Border Patrol, various NC Law Enforcement agencies, and is a member of Law Enforcement Training Specialist, Inc., and Eastern States Working Dogs Association.

National Drug Search holds operational permits from the US Justice Department, Drug Enforcement Administration and the NC Department of Health and Human Services Justice Systems. Additionally, he and his dogs are certified annually as a narcotics detection teams for Marijuana, Heroin, Ecstasy, Cocaine and Methamphetamine. This certification includes the various derivatives of these drugs. This certification is recognized by all state and federal judicial districts nation wide.

Joe's dogs are sporting breed dogs selected for their keen noses and strong drive to work. They are also selected for their friendliness and desire to playfully interact with people. His dog today is Keda (key-dah). She is a five-year-old German Shorthair Pointer.
